

Raymond V. Dittamore

Serves on the Board of Directors of QUALCOMM Incorporated, Invitrogen Corporation, Gen-Probe Incorporated and Digirad Corporation. His board participation with these companies includes serving as the chair of the audit and compensation committees as well as participation on the governance committee. He is a retired audit partner of Ernst & Young, an international accounting firm, where he culminated a 35 year career, including serving as managing partner of the San Diego and Brussels offices.

He is a founder of BIOCOM in San Diego and has served on numerous civic boards. Currently he serves on the Board of Directors of The Campanile Foundation and the College of Business at San Diego State University.

He is a graduate of San Diego State University and has attended Advanced Management Programs at Harvard and Northwestern Universities.